GREAT FIFTY CENTS ON THE DOLLAR

SALE OF CLOTHING

We are going to make some improvements in our store room after January 1st. The contract is signed and sealed with the contractors—consequently we are compelled to sell our stock or pack it away. We prefer selling it at a sacrifice.

NOTHING RESERVED.

Every suit of Clothes, every Overcoat, every Pair of Pants marked in plain figures. We will just split them in half. This means 50 cents on the dollar. The cheapest sale of fine ready made clothing in Kentucky.

Our business is not conducted by fakes and guessing schemes. The man that's selling watch chains on the street corner for $1, throwing in a watch just to show his generosity, needs watching. "Bunco Steers," "Raffle Dazzle" tricksters and green goods sharp always promise great returns from small investments. Intelligent minds are on the racket, and take no stock in such humbuggery. "This value they want."

100 CENTS WORTH OF GOODS

FOR 100 CENTS IN CASH

Is what we give the people. But at this sale

100 CENTS WORTH AT 50 CENTS ON THE DOLLAR!

YOUNG MEN IN POLITICS.

The Longest Term of Cabinet Service of the Government.

Tom Benton began his illustrious 30 years in the Senate when he was 38. John M. Clayton had just passed his 33d golden milestone in life when he took the oath as a Senator, though in the interim he had for a short time been Chief Justice of Delaware and also Secretary of State for President Taylor, and in that capacity accomplishing the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. Calhoun was 29 when first sent to Congress, and but 35 when he entered on his seven years' administration of the War Department under President Monroe, which, with one exception, was the longest term of cabinet service in the history of the government. Calhoun had shown his aptitude for public life long before coming to Congress. At the age of 24 he entered the House of Representatives, and at the age of 25 in the South Carolina Legislature.

Henry Clay was remarkable in everything, and in nothing more than in the confidence and enthusiasm he inspired when a very young man. The history of American politics can show no parallel. He was appointed first to the Senate at 29, before he was of constitutional age. At the age of 34 he entered the House and was elected Speaker on the first day of his appearance in that body. His fame as Speaker in the Kentucky Legislature had preceded him, and five times he was re-elected to that great office. New York sent young men to Congress—Edward Livingston and W. H. King—to the Senate in 1810, and in 1811 John C. Calhoun, of Maryland, who presided over the first body that nominated Clay for the Presidency, was but 26 when he entered Congress. John Tyler was 37 when elected to the Senate. Nathaniel Bacon, who was in Congress 37 years from Georgia, and was for nearly a quarter of a century called the father of Congress, was but 31 when he was sent to the Second Congress in 1791. Keitt, of South Carolina, who achieved fame in the antebellum Congress, and fell fighting for the Lost Cause, was but 28 when he took his seat in the House.

Fernando Wood, the self-made man, who rose from the cigar maker's bench to the leadership of a great party in Congress, was but 29 when he entered the House in 1811. Wilmot, of proviso fame, was 31 when he appeared on the scene where he was to play so great a part. His ancestor was Cathala A. Crow, also known to fame, and he was but 27 in 1850, when he first took the oath as a M. C. The precocity of this Pennsylvania Congressman had resented itself in the Forty-eighth Congress when Geo. A. Post, of Susquehanna Station, appeared as the youngest member of the House, being but 26.

Andrew Jackson lived so long and so well that we forgot what was a most notable thing in his career. He was a revolutionary soldier trudging along the march, or pacing sentinel duty, clearing the enemy with his old flint lock musket, when he was but 14 years old. At 23 Washington made him district attorney for Tennessee. At 29 he was a United States senator.

John C. Beckwith was the youngest vice-President this country ever had. He came to Congress at 31, and at 35 was elected on the ticket with Buchanan, and was installed as President of the Senate. Caleb Cushing, who carved out a great name for himself as a lawyer and statesman, was 30 when he entered Congress. So, too, was the lip-slipping Whittier, who, when elected Speaker of the Thirtieth Congress, in 1847, was but 38. Charles Sumner was a young Senator when at 40 he took the seat of Daniel Webster.

A TRIBUTE OF RESPECT

To the Memory of Clara E. Keyser—Died January 30, 1892.

This bright and innocent little girl had a very delicate physical organization, while her mental and spiritual capabilities were quite superior to most children of her age. She had scarcely reached her fifteenth anniversary when the summons of death came, January 20, 1892. She shrank not from its swaying power, but was as brave as a lioness, and she met it with a smile. Her father, committed her soul to the care of Him who said: "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." She has gone in the spring time of life, ere hers had been dimmed by a cloud, to the far shore of the Savior to the dying child. How precious this thought to surviving friends. What a message of love and comfort to a earthly parent, who has been called to watch the ebbing of a young life as wave after wave breaks feeble, and the sinking breath and fluttering pulse are lower still; when, at last, comes a great stillness, and a passing over the lip—the child now leaves its body as an angel asleep in her Father's arms, while her spirit ascends in the City of God to meet her mother in Heaven.

There Will Be Music.

It looks very much as if the lobby is about to take a hand in the statute revision business at Frankfort. Personal, political, judicial, local and other interests represented in force at the capitol, prepared to bring every possible influence to bear on the Legislature when it under takes the task of redistricting the State into judicial districts. There will be music when the report of the Revision Commission is taken up, for there will be war between these varied interests, and of which should be given any weight in the consideration of the question. There appears to be a sort of prejudice among the Legislators against the work of the Revision Commission, and it is likely that their reception of the redistricting report. Now, the Commission was not subjected to the same untoward influences that surround the Legislature, and the latter will have to do its work in a more independent and impartial manner than now seems likely, if the people do not accord more confidence to the plan of the Commission than to that of the select committee of the Assembly—Covington Commonwealth.

Defining Judicial Districts.

The House and Senate Committees on Judicial Redistricting have agreed to meet separately, each divide the State as it considers best, and then unite upon a report. Even with all this precaution a great many are dissatisfied, since the interests are so many and so wide reaching, that it will be necessary to caucus on the matter before everybody is brought into the fold. The Senate side of the committee held a meeting last week. Up to date the Senate members, beginning in western sections of the State, have mapped out twenty districts, and has brought them far to Lexington. But it is by no means a complete task, and an adjournment has been had to give everybody time to correspond with the clerk in the various counties that all the details as to the number of cases tried and the character of the litigation may be weighed in forming the districts. It has been agreed to form in the neighborhood of thirty districts, and the population that has been fixed at 60,000.

After the districts are all planned the dates of holding court in the several jurisdictions will be fixed.

Revising the School Law.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Thompson has been studying the whole school law of Kentucky since he was elected, and has accumulated a great deal of data on the subject. Among other things, he has secured letters from almost every clerk in the various counties, expressing his views as to the improvements that should be made. At Capt. Thompson's suggestion, the Educational Council of the House and Senate, with Mr. McCain in the chair, met last week and took up the work in a systematic way, and section by section. All bills touching the school question that have been introduced were before the committee. In this way consideration will be continued until a comprehensive report, embracing all the needs and repeating all the existing portions (and there are many of them) are agreed upon.

A STRANGE INFATUATION.

A Young Lady Murdered at Memphis, Tenn., by "The Lover."

The mystery of the cause of the murder of Miss Freda Ward, by Miss Alice Mitchell, is involved, as is demonstrated by the developments rather increase than diminish the theory of the State's attorneys that the crime was born in a desire to avenge an injury, which Miss Mitchell thought had been done her by members of the Ward family, who were the cause of her extraordinary infatuation for her victim.

In an interview with her counsel soon after the murder, Miss Mitchell said: "I killed Freda because I loved her and she refused to marry me. I asked her to marry me three times, and at last she consented. We were going to marry here and then go to Louisville."

"What did you intend to do in St. Louis?" asked one of her attorneys.

"Oh, I do not know, but when Freda promised to marry me I was so happy. I sent her an engagement ring and she wore it for a time, but when it was returned I was miserable. I could not bear to be separated from her, and I resolved to kill her. I would rather she were dead than away from me."

The girl then asked one of the lawyers where Freda was. She was told that the body was at the undertaker's.

"Oh, I said 'I could only see her. Please let me go to see her. If I could only lie down by her side I would be so happy.'"

When permission was refused she broke into a torrent of tears, but for having killed Freda, but for the separation. The letters that she wrote to Freda are full of the most endearing terms, and go to show that the girl eagerly looked forward to the time when she could make Freda her wife. It also appears that Freda willingly consented to the proposed union, and that the time was set for a wedding, planned. On the other hand, the State's attorneys have learned that on Monday afternoon Miss Mitchell was followed to the scene of the murder by a man in a buggy who stopped and watched her while she did the butchery, and when it was finished, drove rapidly away.

It is also learned that Miss Mitchell and Miss Lillie Johnson, who is also charged with the murder, have recently taken out of the postoffice a number of letters addressed respectively to "Jesse James" and "Fanny Williams."

The plea of the defense in Miss Mitchell's case will be insanity, and in support of this theory it will be shown that her mother was deranged for some time prior to her birth, and also for a few months immediately preceding the birth of her oldest sister.

Miss Mitchell does not feel the confinement in jail, but she is so weak as a school-girl, a slight punishment. On other subjects she talks rationally, as she does on the killing, but for the peculiar views she entertains on the marriage, —Memphis special to Courier-Journal.

"Uncle Sam."

At the beginning of this century the slaughtering of cattle and the packing of beef for the New York, Boston and Philadelphia markets was pursued and carried by the firm of Ebenezer & Samuel Wilson, two brothers from Mason, N. H., who had settled at Troy in 1780. At their two large slaughter houses they frequently killed 1,000 head of cattle each week for shipment to the three cities. When the war of 1812 began their beef and pork were in great demand, and not a few army contractors gave them large orders for the delivery of these provisions at the camp at Greenlawn, where, among other recruits, were a number from Troy. The soldiers from Troy, seeing the barrels of beef and pork marked with the letters "U. S." by the government inspectors, denominated them as "Uncle Sam's," meaning that Samuel Wilson, whom they familiarly called "Uncle Sam," was the person from whom the meat had been purchased. The other soldiers assuming that the term "Uncle Sam" was a name for the government, stamped on the barrels began using the appellation "Uncle Sam" figuratively for the United States Government. From that time the designation "Uncle Sam" for the letters "U. S." grew into popular acceptance, and has ever since been as familiarly known as that of "John Bull" for the English nation.

Local Legislation.

Constitution or no Constitution, the Senate Judiciary Committee reported a local bill to amend the act relating to the building of a bridge in Breathitt county, and expressed the opinion that it should pass. Judge Lindsay, who made the report, explained that there were some kinds of local legislation which the Constitution did not prohibit; likewise that was the opinion of his committee and himself, and they proposed to amend by it such unconstitutional laws as were now pending. The bill, it will be recalled, had been previously considered and was referred to this committee for an expert diagnosis of the Constitutional question involved.

It is a fact worth knowing that, as a household remedy, for children and adults, Ayer's Pills are invaluable.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From Our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 28, 1892.

The war crisis has been much to the disgust of the young naval officers and others ambitious of earning glory in the canon's mouth, and of the men who had hoped to largely increase their bank accounts by means of profitable government contracts, and the pleasure of ordinary folks. It is now conceded by those who were at first inclined to blame President Harrison for unnecessary haste in sending an ultimatum, and in sending the correspondence and his vigorous message to Congress, that he was pursuing the very best course for bringing the war to a speedy termination. In Congress all political differences were for the time forgotten and every day became intensely American. The result, as might have been expected, an almost unanimous vote in favor of the bill introduced by Mr. Chandler. It is not the first time that active preparations for war have resulted in assuring peace.

The Farmer's Alliance Representatives were given their first official recognition in the House by being allowed one hour out of the seven devoted to debate on the new rules. Representative Olin, of Kansas, after stating that the third party was founded on the equal rights Jeffersonian doctrine, on the policy of Washington, and upon the Lincoln idea of the superiority of labor to capital, criticized the rules as conferring a dangerous power on the Speaker and the Committee on Rules. Representative Watson, of Georgia, made the principles of the Alliance the basis of his remarks, telling that millions of the land were looking to those principles as their only means of relief. Other Alliance members also made brief speeches.

If Oklahoma does not become a State during the present Congress it will not be for any lack of effort on the part of delegate Harvey, who looks after the interests of that hitherto Territory in the House. He has already introduced a bill to that effect.

The resolution providing for an investigation as to whether the appropriation heretofore made for the World's Fair has been judiciously expended has been favorably reported to the House, and it will be passed. This does not indicate a hostile feeling towards the exposition, on the contrary, it is intended to furnish the managers an opportunity to show Congress how well the appropriations have been spent.

A bill to prohibit the sale of firearms to Indians residing on reservations has been favorably reported to the Senate. Representative Livingston, of Georgia, this week introduced a bill for the establishment of a system of sub-treasures, in accordance with the Ocala demands of the Farmer's Alliance.

Representative Rogers, of California, is not enamored of the new House rules. He says his people want some appropriations for their harbors, and that if he understands the rules right he will not be "in it" unless he can get a "pull" on the River and Harbor Committee.

There is a movement among the Cleveland Democrats to throw their strength to Carlisle, if, as is expected, Mr. Cleveland shall decline to allow his name to go before the convention. This movement is so new that its strength cannot be estimated at this time, but there are good reasons for the belief that Mr. Cleveland will not favor the nomination of Mr. Carlisle.

The Senate, without a division, adopted the report from the Committee on Elections confirming the right of Senator Chilton, appointed by the Governor of Texas, to serve out the unexpired term of Senator Reagan, to his seat.

Ever since China refused to receive ex-Senator Blair as Minister from this country, there have been ugly rumors among Washington intimating that the influence of certain Americans interested in certain concessions which they hoped to get from China had more to do with it than Mr. Blair's Congressional record on the Chinese question. Whether the more influential Senator Morgan I cannot say, but he was once offered a resolution, which was adopted by the Senate, requesting the President to furnish copies of all the correspondence between the two governments on the subject, if it can be done without injury to the public interests.

The National Board of Trade, with representatives from all the principal cities of the country, has been in session here for three days this week. A feature of the meeting was an attack on the Interstate Commerce law, which the Board does not believe in.

LETTER FROM TEXAS.

A Description of that Country by a Member of the Texas House.

EDINBURGH, Texas Jan. 26, '92. EDITOR HERALD:—According to a former promise to my many Kentucky friends, I will describe this beautiful country. I arrived at Quanah on Friday last at 5:05 p. m. There I took a view of what we Kentuckians would call a delightful country composed of vast prairie but somewhat broken. On Saturday, at 10:30 a. m., I arrived at the beautiful little city of Edinburg. I was then conveyed from there to the residence of Mr. Farnsworth, formerly of Wolfe county, Ky., where I passed of their genial hospitality, which could only be duly appreciated by a weary traveler—some 1,200 miles. Dinner was soon announced, the preparation of which was only possible with a Kentucky larder. After we had done full justice to our meal, I was accompanied by my friends James and Mort (Walter) Pieratt. As we all did not have horses, we named over the prairie for some twelve miles and returned about sun down, and then partook of a Kentucky supper.

Mr. Pieratt and myself on Sunday hired a rig and went to Quanah, a distance of 14 miles. We have here a variety of soil; some near the river being very sandy. Here they have severe s. d. storms. Next to this lies a black soil, however, not very heavy. There we find a red soil. There is very little difference in the producing quality of each.

On the 19th of the present month came the severest winter storm ever experienced in the State. The snow in many places drifted to the height of four feet and belated the south-bound trains ten hours.

This section of the State is being settled up very rapidly. Six months ago there were only one or two houses to be seen in this section, and today I stood in the yard and counted eighteen houses, and there are quite a number who will build as soon as they can. I bought a claim of 320 acres yesterday, and will begin plowing in a day or two. Wheat crops look well, and big preparations are being made for a large out crop. Stock of all kinds is high. Young men when they come here should be able to buy a claim of their own, as there is no work for you only through harvest. If a man depends on public works for support he has no business here. Every man does his own work. Come and look for yourself. One man can cultivate three times the amount of land here that he can in Kentucky and the yield is much better, nevertheless we are subject to droughts here; and admitting that they are not so frequent as in our native soil, in two years that you can in three, and do it with much less work. Mort Pieratt has a quarter section, one yoke of cattle, and says he can break two acres of soil every day and raise more wheat than any man. He also has his dug-out nearly complete, and the next thing in order is an Indian squaw. Ha! ha! Mort and his honey!

You will please send THE HERALD to Edinburg, Texas, instead of Rutwell, Ky.

"Seeing is Believing."

And a good lamp must be simple; when it is not simple it is not good. Simple, Beautiful, Good—these words mean much, but to see "The Rochester" will impress the truth more forcibly. All metal, tough and seamless, and made in three pieces only, it is absolutely safe and unbreakable. Like Aladdin's of old, it is indeed a "wonderful lamp," for its marvelous light is purer and brighter than gas light, softer than electric light and more cheerful than either.

Look for this lamp. THE ROCHESTER. If the lamp dealer has not the genuine Rochester, and he will not send to us for our new illustrated catalogue, and we will send you a lamp safely by express—your choice of over 2,000 patterns from the Largest Lamp Store in the World.
